Arrested

I had just finished the book Just Mercy by Brian Stevenson and it inspired me to put my own law firm in Wisconsin, specifically in Milwaukee. This city is one of the top 10 most dangerous cities in America said by CBS. When I lived here growing up and moved to New York for college at Columbia's Law School. So when I was watching the news and saw that my place of the home was number six I started to wonder if there were so many crimes, meaning that there were a lot of innocent people in prison or jail. So I got to work and I made the Milwaukee Law Firm of Rights Form.

Which in fact due to Mr. Stevenson I have chosen to make my office free, it sounds like I'm coping Mr. Stevenson I have taken some slight inspiration and then later when I become known with the community I will do my own thing. My first case was a Hispanic named Hector Reyes, Hector was sentenced to life because he was found killing three people in cold blood in an alleyway behind the Rey Superstore on Cesar E Chaves Dr. The three people were Billy Harper a 14 year old, the second one was Brenda Myers a 26-year-old that was a well-known dealer for youngsters like Billy. The third person was a police officer named Stevie Brown, Stevie had been tracing down Brenda for over three years.

The next morning I went up to the Marshall Sherrer Correctional Center to visit Hector and the moment I arrived I smelled horror and despair. I stepped in the prison with hopelessness being shoved in my face but I kept a smile and went to go ask for Hector and the guards just looked at me like if I was lost in the woods. "Umm, hey are you looking for something bean!" One of the guards shouted at me.

"I'm looking for Mr. Hector Reyes. I have a meeting with him today." I answered. He pointed to a bin so I started to take off my clothes but then he yelled no and took my briefcase and put it into the bin. He scanned it, no beep. He scanned me, beeping happened. I was thrown to the ground and searched all over my body. I felt harassed as I just thought they weren't using all their force but how they weren't supposed to but the poor inmates how rough they were being treated.

"BOYS, BOYS! Calm down!" Shouted a deep cold frozen voice. The guards stopped and put me up and ruffled my suit back up to perfect. I was put into a conference room where Hector was on the other side of the table.

"Mr. Reyes, I'm here to ask questions about what you at the murder scene," I said, as I started to get out important papers.

"Umm well, so I was buying my frutas and vegetables. I was coming out and I heard some argument and well I ignored it, but then I heard a gunshot so I ran to the sound and I saw two people on the ground lying there in blood. Over them is this chamaco with a gun in his hands, then he shot himself. I went to go call the police but they came and arrested me for something I didn't do and put me in this place." He cried.

1 Year Later**

I have been collecting enough evidence, Hector has been put on death row and time is running out. His new court case date is set for March 3, 2001, and now I'm in a rush since I've been working hard on other cases. But something I found was that the cameras were off so nobody saw and nobody can prove that Hector did or didn't do it. So I had to go across the street to the furniture store, I went to the time when the incident happened and a second before the killing started, a man went up and started to take pictures and then the camera cuts off and then it shows the police at the Rey.

I took this evidence to the court case and the Judge took it for granted, which meant that I had to get more information. I looked more into Hector's case and realized Hector wasn't at the scene until all the victims were dead because on a neighbor's camera Hector goes and puts his food into his car and then he went to go see what was happening, in which he gets arrested because his "fingerprints" at the crime scene.

I downloaded the footage and went to the court in Madison and gave them the scene and within the two weeks, Hector was freed from death row. Hector changed his life, he went to school to get a diploma for a better job. Once he got the diploma he joined the police. With the same people that got him arrested. He got married and had a daughter named Ellie who works with me at the firm. Hector helped change the rules of how people got arrested, and they found the real killer. Brenda's husband was the killer and now is serving his punishment,

Things can change if you stand up for what you believe, just like how many people get put in jail and they are the wrong person. Many fight for their freedom just like Bryan Stevenson and like myself in this fictional story. Thank you for reading and I hope that we can all change the world into a better place.
